Claims 2-4

None of the documents cited in the ISR describes a substrate treating method, in which (1) control is made to ensure the relation of $T1 \le T2 \le T3 \le$ the boiling point of an organic solvent, where T1 is the temperature in a steam generating section; T2 is the temperature of the mixed gas consisting of the organic solvent and an inert gas in the range from the steam generating section to a spray nozzle; and T3 is the temperature of the dry gas sprayed from the spray nozzle is made to contain an organic solvent mist of sub-micron size. This constitution is not considered to be obvious to a person skilled in the art either.

Claims 6-9

None of the documents cited in the ISR describes a substrate treating apparatus, in which (1) control is made to ensure the relation of $T1 \le T2 \le T3 \le$ the boiling point of an organic solvent, where T1 is the temperature in a steam generating section; T2 is the temperature in a first pipe; and T3 is the temperature in a spray nozzle, and (2) the dry gas sprayed from the spray nozzle is made to contain an organic solvent mist of sub-micron size. This constitution is not considered to be obvious to a person skilled in the art either.
